THE K. L. MIXTURES.

Why Their Action on Trees and Scales Is Variable,

One of the newer insecticide combinations for treatment of San Jose scale sists of a mixture of kerosene in water produced by the use of time in very fine particles. This combination has been strongly recommended by a few experiment stations and has been used on a large scale with a more or less satisfactory degree of success by some orchardists. It possesses an advantage over the sulphur washes in requiring no boiling. But tests made at the New Jersey station during 1905 indicate that the lower strengths of the "K. L.," or kerosene lime, mixtures are not efficient against scale and that the stronger mixtures - these containing larger percentages of kerosene are liable to injure the trees because certain portions of the mixtures contain much more of the kerosene than other portions. In other words, the mixture is not uniform or not permanent. In the original preparation of these mixtures at the Delaware station a ommercial form of lime and other forms of water staked or finely ground lime were found to give about the Various treatments of trees at the New Jersey station with these preparations resulted in a lack of uniformity

These variations showed that as or dinarily made these "K. L." emulsions, so called, may give at the nogrie pure oil, pure water, whitewash or an emulsion. By chemical determinations far the greater part of the kerosene is found in the upper layer, while only his admirers do not realize. When the President went to Gen, doe Wheelers funeral here some weegks ago he saw sitting to the right of him a dozen or more aged veterans over whom dozen or more aged veterans over whom floated a tattered ensign with the inscription. "Wheeler's Old Cavairy". And learning that the remnants of this organization had come from Atlanta to Washington to attend the funeral of their chieftain he sent them an invitation to come to the White House the next morning and he would be glad to receive them. Be-cause many of them were comrades of his father, who died about one year ago, his father, who died about one year ago, Capt. Fitzhugh Lee, U. S. A., one of the White House aids, was detailed by the President to present the veterans to him. Standing at the right of the President as each veteran approached, Capt. Lee would ask his name in a whisper, and then present him to the President, calling the remaining beauty price. ng the name in a clear voice. Toward the name in a clear voice. Like Twenty-three Cents.

The figure "23", which is the meaning for "skidoo," has caused no end of amusement in a drug store on North Peart, street. Before the hour of 10 o'clock it is the custom for the clerk who sells an article to call out the amount to the cashier as the customer is walking toward the latter's desk. The calling out of the figures "23" vesterday was the reason for one customer turning back, and asking the clerk if he really meant "23". Since then the clerk is in dauger of falling into the habit of stuttering in his efforts to evade calling out these figures.—Albany Journal.

the greater part of the kerosene is found in the upper layer, while only a small portion of the oil is carried to the lower layer by lime as it settles down.

The Conclusion.

As kerosene, when applied pure, may cause severe injury, the foregoing facts explain why these "K. L." mixtures have injured some trees while others were unaffected. The figures also over their value for producing gas being, generally speaking, exactly inverse to their value in directly producing steam in a boiler. That is to say, the poorer the coal for direct, steam-producing purposes (by which power coal has been valued in the past), the more valuable it seems to be for yielding gas for use in the gas engipe."

take the place of, celery. At the date I gave that testimonial I had not seen the foliage and did not recognize the the stalks last spring. At first our family ate quite freely of it and thought it a very good substitute for The Mixture Separates.

Careful examination of the various mixtures showed the lack of uniformity to be due to imperfect emulsification of the same thing we should be the same thing we grew in our garden over forty years ago. It was called 'lovage' or 'smell-

It is quite possible that the promoters of the new hardy "celery" believe they have a valuable new prod-uct and are reasonably justified in demanding a large introductory price for the roots, but if Professor Hilborn's identification is correct and they are really disseminating the old and com-paratively valueless lovage plant as a sensational novelty they cannot be in-
